DETAILED ACTION

Continued Examination Under 37 CFR 1.114

1. A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on September 7, 2005 has been entered.

Preliminary Remarks

2. This Office action responds to the amendment and arguments filed by applicant on September 7, 2005 in reply to the previous Office action on the merits, mailed July 12, 2005.
3. The amendment of claim 14 in the reply filed by applicant on September 7, 2005 is hereby acknowledged.

Election/Restriction

4. Claims 1-13 and 27-30 continue to stand withdrawn from further consideration pursuant to 37 CFR 1.142(b) as being drawn to a non-elected invention, there being no allowable generic or linking claim. Election was made without traverse in the reply filed November 17, 2004.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

5. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

6. Claims 14-20, 22, and 24-26 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Bailey Jr. et al., in view of Gazzuolo (US 6,546,309).

Regarding claims 14, 16, 18, 19, and 26, Bailey Jr. et al. disclose a method of selling goods, comprising the steps of: selecting human models representing categories of a pre-set classification of goods (styles and sizes/physical characteristics); trying on the goods by the human models of the respective categories, at least one model being assigned to try on goods that belong to a category of the classification (inherent); obtaining body measurements (measurements/sizes) of a customer to determine to which category in the pre-set classification of goods the customer belongs; based on the body measurements, assigning by a computer system to the customer the category (size) that corresponds to a human model having individual characteristics (sizes/measurements) corresponding to the body measurements of the customer; determining evaluation marks by the computer system (inherent: customer's evaluation for example, "buy," "don't buy," etc.) for the goods in the category assigned to the customer; pre-selecting by the computer system, based on the determined evaluation marks, a group of items (the items to be purchased) among the goods in the category assigned to the customer; and, enabling the customer to access said group of items. See, in particular, the paragraph bridging pages 6 and 7, as well as the paragraph immediately thereafter. The method of Bailey Jr. et al., though, does not include that the evaluation marks are quantitative and are pre-set based on evaluating the goods tried on by the respective model, nor that a model or an expert makes the evaluation or selection. However, it is common in the art for evaluations to be made by experts or the person trying on clothes. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art, at the time of the invention, to employ a model or an expert to make the evaluation or selection, because such individuals would be qualified to make a correct evaluation/selection. Regarding the evaluation marks for fit being quantitative, Gazzuolo teaches the use of fit evaluation marks that are quantitative. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art, at the time of the invention, to have further modified the method of Bailey Jr. et al. so as to use evaluation marks that were quantitative, in accordance with the teachings of Gazzuolo, in order to establish relative preferences for garments having varying degrees of fit.

Regarding claim 15, the method of Bailey Jr. et al. includes that the customer is enabled to watch video images depicting in motion the human models wearing the pre-selected items.

Regarding claim 17, the goods of Bailey Jr. et al. include clothes items.

Regarding claim 20, the pre-set classification of Bailey Jr. et al. takes into account body types of customers (sizes/physical characteristics).

Regarding claim 22, Bailey Jr. et al. do not teach that the classification takes eye color into account. However, it is common in the art to recommend clothing based on a customer's eye color. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art, at the time of the invention, to employ the step of taking eye color into account for classification to select clothing that would complement a customer's eyes.

Regarding claims 24 and 25, the method of Bailey Jr. et al. includes that the customer is enabled to access data on additional items associated with each of the pre-selected items (e.g., style variations, etc.), wherein the additional items are pre-selected when the goods are tried on by the human model (inherent).

7. Claims 21 and 23 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Bailey Jr. et al., in view of Gazzuolo (US 6,546,309), and further in view of Weaver.

Bailey Jr. et al. disclose a method of selling goods, as applied above in the rejection of claims 14 and 20 under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), but Bailey Jr. et al. do not teach that a customer's hair color or skin tone are taken into account. However Weaver discloses a similar method, and the method of Weaver indeed teaches taking hair color (17) and skin tone (15) into account in making recommendations/selections. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art, at the time of the invention, to have further modified the method of Bailey Jr. et al. so as to take hair color and/or skin tone into account when recommending/selecting items, in accordance with the teachings of Weaver, in order to recommend/select items of clothing that would best complement a particular customer.

Response to Arguments

8. Applicant's arguments filed Sept. 7, 2005 have been fully considered but are not persuasive.
9. The arguments regarding the previous prior art rejections have been considered, but have been rendered moot by applicant's amendment, and the consequent new grounds of rejection.
